"Bought and Paid For" a Great Film Plot, Grand Today

When Cecil DeMille selected Agnes Ayres and Jack Holt for the leading roles in George Broadhurst's celebrated play, "Bought and Paid For," he assembled a cast that was in keeping with these two great stars. Walter Hiers in his mimical portrayal of the comedy part, with George Kuwa the Jap, Bernice Frank and Ethel Wales give splendid support. This great picture is on at the Grand this afternoon and tonight. Tomorrow Anita Stewart comes in a First National Super-Special, "Sowing the Wind."

Myrtle Steadman in her impersonation of the notorious woman will carry the sympathy rather than the censure of the audience because of her acting. Anita Stewart in her search for happiness, her splendid stand in not denying her mother, and her willingness to sacrifice her lover rather than spoil his life, will keep the audience atingle. The scene of the drug-maddened mother crooning to a pillow as to her baby, and the meeting of the mother and daughter, will bring tears to many eyes.

Burglars Enter Filling Station, But Get Nothing

The filling station of the Standard Oil company on Lemon street was broken into Sunday night by prying open one of the rear windows, but Manager Taylor reports that no loss has been discovered. The safe was not in any way molested, nor was anything else disturbed to any great extent. The burglars succeeded in entering only after they tried to pry open the second window—the first one having been too well constructed to easily give way to the chisel.

POLICE COURT GROUND

GOOD CRIST ON MONDAY

In the municipal court this morning the overflow of Saturday night and Sunday cases was heard and disposed of in quick order—because of the promised parade of the circus which all city officials desired to view.

James Carroll, charged with larceny, was turned free after he had returned funds which he was accused of appropriating. He said he didn't take a cent, but was willing to "dig down" rather than have more trouble.

Liver Jones, arrested for fighting, failed to appear for hearing, and his cash bond of five dollars was ordered estreated.

Eliza Zada, who was charged with using some unladylike profanity upon the streets of the city, settled the matter by producing the five dollars with which to pay the fine assessed by the court.

Willie May Wright was assessed ten dollars and costs for his display of fighting ability, and Will Purcell and J. E. Johnson, who, possibly, were not so expert at the game and showed less interest, were allowed freedom on payment, each, of five dollars with the customary costs.

"Court is adjourned now that all may view the other circus," briefly remarked Judge Kemmerly—and the morning lesson was ended.
